However, electrolytic capacitors have a limited lifespan and age faster than dry components. This is a particular weakness in cheaper budget inverters, which have failed in as little as 2 years. The second most common reason for failure is using inverters beyond their operating limits, whether by choice or due to oversight or lack of knowledge.

The limited number of PowerUP partners have been selected by SMA specifically for their long term industry experience and their commitment to a quality customer outcomes. SolarWide are very proud of this partnership, as we have been installing SMA inverters since 2011, and found them to cope very well with our local environmental conditions.
